Dear Hiring Manager,

I am writing to apply for the position of Backend Software Engineer at iManage. I believe my previous experience in backend development and my passion for learning new things make me an ideal candidate for this position.

Over the past 6 months I have had the opportunity to work for the Ontario Ministry of Health developing a full stack application in Javascript. This experience has given me plenty of experience working within a small team of developers working closely on the same project, as well as valuable experience designing and maintaining parts of the backend for our application. I believe this experience would be valuable for the backend software engineer opportunity. Beyond work, I also have experience working in backend development on my own time. I have created several servers and APIs for my personal projects, including a template for a backend in Python using FastAPI and CockroachDB which is helpful for getting an API up and running quickly. I learned to make these projects mostly on my own time out of curiosity and a desire to try something new.

If possible, I would love to meet with you and further demonstrate how my experience and my passion for learning new things would make me a great fit at iManage. I hope to hear from you soon.

Sincerely,

Julien Bertazzo Lambert
